

What are your core values and beliefs?

- My core value is hard and smart work through practicality, as I strongly believe that practice makes perfect. Over the past 4-5 months, I have learned so many things, and upon completing the first stage, I believe I can perform even better in the future. I believe nothing is impossible; we have all the resources on the internet. Whenever I am faced with unfamiliar topics, I adopt a proactive approach to gain knowledge, reflecting my belief that learning is a continuous journey. I believe the results come to Allah. I work for success in my work but if I fail, it becomes an opportunity to enhance my knowledge and gain guidance for the future.

What are your goals and aspirations?

- My goal is to become a successful developer. After this long journey and so much effort, I believe, InshAllah, I can achieve this. I also have a long-term goal: to establish a successful agency in the development field. Before reaching that milestone, I aim to gain extensive experience to build a strong foundation for the agency. Acquiring a good amount of experience will provide long-term benefits for the journey of my agency. I am determined to grasp the intricacies of this field, leading the agency with a firm and knowledgeable hand, ensuring its success and making a lasting impact. And I also want to improve our Bangladeshi development community by sharing my journey tips and tricks.

What are the first steps you will take to build your personal brand?

- I am taking some steps to build my personal branding. In the initial stage, I focused on enhancing my GitHub profile, gradually adding more impactful projects styling my GitHub profile. Moving forward, I am establishing a strong online presence by creating a professional profile on platforms like LinkedIn, where I showcase my projects. Actively engaging with online communities and sharing my knowledge is a priority. In the future, I plan to explore additional avenues to further strengthen and expand my personal brand.

How does personal branding differ from self-promotion, and why is this distinction important?

- Actually, personal branding differs from self-promotion. I believe that personal branding is not just about showcasing my knowledge or skills; it also reflects who I am and represents my values in the long term. Self-promotion involves sharing my achievements with others, demonstrating how those accomplishments connect with people.

What are you most proud of?

- One of my proudest achievements is becoming a web developer. After this 4-5 month long journey, Alhumdulillah, I have accomplished this goal. In these months, I dedicated myself by spending 7-8 hours almost every day, aligning my entire day with the programming hero team. The journey to reach this milestone demanded dedication and hard work. Completing the first step brought me joy and satisfaction. Looking ahead, I aspire to maintain this hardworking attitude, continuously improving my skills. My goal is not only to make myself proud but also to bring pride to my present and all those who have been my teachers and mentors along this rewarding journey.